SHELF LIFE:

A top-down view of a white ceramic plate filled with a Mediterranean side dish. The dish consists of fluffy yellow quinoa, orange chickpeas, and sautéed vegetables including a green leek, a black olive, and pieces of roasted potato and carrot. A sprig of fresh dill is garnished on top. The plate is set on a white lace doily over a dark wooden surface.

Mediterranean side dishes are convenient food products to stock in the pantry, as they are easy and fast alternatives to rice, quinoa, and noodles. The neutral taste of these Mediterranean side dishes allows them to be kept as simple nutritious side dishes for stews and meals. They can also be integrated in fresh salad recipes or infused with broths, stocks, meats, vegetables, and spices for a satisfying main meal.
